TELL OUR STORY

DOES THIS LOOK LIKE PROGRESS FOR SCHUYLKILL COUNTY?

Streams sit downstream of industrial activity. Waste operations expand. Families live with dust, truck traffic, odor, and the feeling that their health is treated as acceptable collateral damage. When neighbors speak up, they meet indifference, bureaucracy, and political protection.

Corporate greed and reckless decision making by neighboring township authorities has forced many residents who never sought activism to stand up against the irresponsible decisions being made for them in their own backyards. Financial gain must not be elevated above the health of local communities.
